Home Technical Sound Yamaha 01v96 update? Ok, this may be a dumb question... but I can't find the answer. Is VCM a hardware or software part of the 01v96? Can a V2 be upgraded to a VCM with software or do you have to buy VCM to get VCM? Thanks in advance. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? VCM is software. Basically, the console is the same except that it now includes the plugins that were sold separately for the V2. Since the software is not cheap, it is cheaper to sell the V2 and buy the new VCM model than to do the upgrade, but the end result should be the same. At least that what it looks like to me..... Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? But if I found a good deal on a used V2 it can be upgraded to VCM? or would it still be expensive? I dont see anywhere on yamaha's site about this, except for the latest firmware dowloads of VCM and V2... can you not download the VCM firmware to a V2 board? Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? My understanding is that doesn't work. The separate Yamaha packages are $400-500 each and would have to be purchased and installed to the V2 to make it comparable to the VCM model. The upgrade could be over $1000 if done that way. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? VCM is a firmware upgrade that includes the new FX. It is available as a dealer-supported upgrade that runs around $400, IIRC, but that could be very wrong. Contact a major Yamaha dealer for more info. Have fun, good luck. Tim Mc Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? Thanks, Dick, very helpful. Looks like about $900 to Yamaha for the upgrade... I'll pass. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? Well even at $400... with a $1400 used mixer, thats $1800, I can get new for around $200 more than that... so I'd still pass... thanks for the info guys. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? Tim, when I searched the info out before, Yamaha was offering the upgrade to dealers that had inventory and to units that were sold within some small timeframe before the switchover. I was told that since my console was several years old a dealer would NOT be authorized to make that upgrade for me. If these facts are no longer correct and an upgrade path cheaper than buying the VCM software was available I would buy it, but I have not seen anything to make me think the policy has changed..... ADD: In fact I have been looking for the Rev-X and channel strip packages either used or on sale and they don't seem to ever surface. I did manage to miss a sale by Sound Productions over Christmas that would have given me the packages for about $400 total and was too late to buy them. If anyone here has these packages and wants to sell them for a fair price I am your guy. Let me know.... Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? call your yamaha dealer that you are good friends with, I got mine to send me a upgrade disc gratis, tho I've bought a lot from him. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? Well my closest Yamaha dealer is over an hour drive. Several stores are closer so I haven't bought anything from them in 20 years. The board was bought used off the LAB. So.....probably won't happen unless someone on here wants to be generous with a copy, sell me a copy for something notably less than list, or someone here has the plugins and doesn't need/want them any more. I do appreciate the thought however. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? I just checked with Northern Sound. The Rev-X package and the channel strip package both run about $400 each... OUCH. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? I know, which is why I said I would buy packages used if anyone wanted to sell. I could see maybe $4-500 at most for both, but can't justify $800. For a little more than that I could buy another 01v96 and link them which would give me more benefit than the VCM upgrade alone. Actually, eBay had an 01v96VCM for $1400(ish) as a buy it now just a few weeks ago. Re: 01v96v2 to VCM?? Still have one for $1500 in California but the guy won't ship.
